Tribal Council members, planning staff speak at Tideflats Steering Committee meeting

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

The City of Tacoma Tideflats Steering Committee met in July to discuss planning and land use for tideflats in the surrounding area.

The committee includes two representatives from the City of Tacoma, City of Fife, Pierce County, the Port of Tacoma and the Puyallup Tribe, with Chairman Bill Sterud and Councilwoman Annette Bryan as its representatives.

The committee will eventually present a recommendation for land use to the City of Tacoma Planning Commission and City Council.

At its July 11 meeting, the committee discussed key areas within the tideflats and land use concepts for those areas, which include the Puyallup River and parts of the port.

Chairman Sterud and Councilwoman Bryan argued against any uses of land that would involve liquefied natural gas or methanol plants, and anything else with a chemical or fossil fuel-oriented use, leading to some differentiation on opinion between the Tribe and Port of Tacoma.

Chairman Sterud said the river had been grossly mistreated over many years. "We'll do what we have to do to make sure our river is protected," Chairman Sterud said.

Puyallup Tribe Planning and Land Use Director Andrew Strobel said the Tribe is thinking about protecting not only its cultural resources, but also fish and other natural resources in any future development.

"Is the future of the Tribe's reservation going to be a more sustainable and supportive future for its members is what we're looking at," he said.

Councilwoman Bryan shared with the committee that now is a good opportunity to right some wrongs of the past in how Puyallup Tribal land has been treated.

"Anything we put here has a consequence," Councilwoman Bryan said.

The committee's next meeting will primarily focus on transportation in the areas with a goal of making a final recommendation to the City of Tacoma Planning Commission in October.

Councilwoman Bryan visits China, returns with fresh ideas for Puyallup Tribe

By Puyallup Tribal News Staff

In China, half a world away from the Puyallup Reservation, Councilwoman Annette Bryan found striking cultural similarities and possibilities for the future.

She went in late June and early July as part of a 10-day visit to mark the 30th anniversary of the Sister City relationship between Tacoma and Fuzhou. Mayor Victoria Woodards led the delegation and extended an invitation to Tribal Council to participate. The Council sent Councilwoman Bryan to represent the Tribe. Other attendees included city officials and students from Tacoma.

“It was a real honor for the city to include us,” she said, noting the Tribe’s people were the first to inhabit what is now the city of Tacoma. “It recognizes how far we’ve come in our relationship that the city would think to invite us to participate in its trip.”

Sister cities are communities in different countries that have formal agreements to partner on such topics as business, trade and cultural exchanges.

Fuzhou and Tacoma have been Sister Cities since 1994. Fuzhou is a coastal city of more than 7 million people that was a port on the ancient Maritime Silk Road and today has scenery and cultural attractions such as temples and museums that draw millions of tourists a year. Fuzhou donated the Fuzhou Ting in Tacoma Chinese Reconciliation Park through the Sister City partnership. Other collaborations include dragon boat race competitions, educational exchanges between local schools in each city and the 2015 visit of President Xi Jinping to Lincoln High School.

During the “fast-paced” visit, Councilwoman Bryan said she toured port and industrial facilities, something she was especially interested in given the potential of the Tribe’s port property for international trade. Council, she said, is looking to develop mutually beneficial relationships to further its economic development goals. Along the way, she gifted necklaces she’d made on the 15-hour flight, knowing she wouldn’t be able to sleep.

She also gave a speech to Chinese officials to thank them for their hospitality and introduce them to the Tribe.

“I wanted them to know Tribes are sovereign nations, recognized in the U.S. by treaties,” she said, “and that while we share space with the city (of Tacoma), we’re not constituents, we’re elected officials.”

She then focused on economic development, including the Tribe’s manufacturing and warehousing capabilities and its port property as well as shellfish operations and geoduck harvesting.

“I thought the timing was good because we’re trying to develop our port and customers,” she said. “This was a good start.”

It was the hot season, and Councilwoman Bryan recalled extreme humidity, long hours and packed agendas.

The delegation’s hosts, who were friendly themselves, would not allow them to interact with local populations. The people they did get to interact with, she said, seemed to genuinely care about their cities. She also made some observations on her own.

“Not a lot of people were out during the day,” she said. “At night, when it wasn’t hot out, you’d see a lot of people walking on sidewalks or riding on scooters, doing their errands like getting groceries. There were lots of scooters, with different colors.

I learned the people on scooters with yellow helmets were delivery people. If you needed a pair of socks or a suitcase, you’d go on an app and someone with a yellow helmet would deliver it to you.”

The delegates couldn’t download the apps, and they had a hard time using credit cards.

“I was also shocked that I couldn’t use my social media,” Councilwoman Bryan said. “They have a lot of restrictions on what people can access and utilize.”

The delegation spent a lot of time traveling together, she said, and they shared their experiences along the way and compared Tacoma to cities they visited.

“The technology there is just incredible,” she said, recalling a city with driverless buses.

A high-speed train to a port, highway beautification projects and a visit to a dump site that extracts gas for power and fertilizer from refuse were other highlights, as was a river cleanup effort.

“I was impressed,” said Councilwoman Bryan, whose background includes work as an air quality monitor and 10 years at the Environmental Protection Agency.

The trip also included planting a friendship tree and an excursion to Beijing and the Great Wall of China. She hadn't expected to visit the wall and found the high heat and high steps daunting.

"It was like the stairs at the Stadium Bowl," she said, referring to Stadium High School.

The delegates' visit to Beijing coincided with one from Tacoma students.

"My favorite part of the experience was the culture," Councilwoman Bryan said. "I found a lot of similarities to their culture. They're very spiritual people. ... I visited things and prayed in their temples. I was very interested in their spiritual and cultural way of being."

Inside one museum, she said she saw cedar clothing that "looked almost identical to ours." She also tried a variety of local food, such as pork belly. Some of it was unexpected.

"The soup tasted really good," she said. "Someone said, 'That's eel,' and I quit eating it."

One of her most memorable experiences came toward the end of the journey, when the American delegation was waiting in the airport. Tired and sore from the fast-paced traveling, she said, they were stretching and apologizing to their guide.

"She said, 'This is what we do,'" Bryan recalled. The guide demonstrated moves like pulling an imaginary arrow and letting it go and described exercises she performed to get the body and mind moving at the start of a day.

"It was beautiful," Bryan said. "That was one of my favorite exchanges."

The visit came about 25 years after the Tribe sent a canoe family to Fuzhou. Connie McCloud, who today is the Tribe's Heritage Division Manager, was part of that delegation.

"In some ways, we've had a relationship in the past," Councilwoman Bryan said. "This may be a way for us to renew the cultural sharing."

The idea of "sister cities" goes back at least to 1931, when Toledo, Ohio, and Toledo, Spain, formalized a relationship between the cities. President Eisenhower caused the creation of Sister Cities International in 1956, and today the local organization, Tacoma Sister Cities, has relationships with 15 other cities around the world, including Kitakyushu, Japan, and Brovary, Ukraine.

The 6th U.S.-China Sister Cities Summit was slated for July 18-19, after the Puyallup Tribal News goes to press, and Councilwoman Bryan said the Tribe will reciprocate some of the hospitality she found in Fuzhou.

Councilwoman Bryan said it's possible for the Tribe to establish its own Sister City relationships. She said Tribal Council would have to carefully consider the idea before pursuing it.

He spoke about the Tribe's history and its current and future economic development.

"We're still here and we'll always be here," Sterud said. "Our people have had a tough go, but there's always been this heart, this strength, there's always been this love for all people."

Chairman Sterud touched on the Tribe's efforts to take back and protect its land.

"This is our home and we're going to fight for the Puyallup River," he said.

Looking ahead to the Tribe's future, Sterud talked about what the Tribe is

June Elders Luncheon

By Puyallup Tribal News Staff

Summertime has arrived and that was plenty evident at the House of Respect for June's Elders Luncheon.

June's Honored Elder was Frank Moxley Griese, who was blanketed and honored with a cedar hat. (See page 24.)

Elders were treated to live music and a great meal before things wrapped up with a raffle.

In addition to the usual cash prizes, the raffle fit in with the summertime theme, with prizes that included patio furniture, a smoker and more, going to some lucky winners.

Tribal Veterans Reflect on D-Day 80th Anniversary

By Michael Sisson,
Puyallup Tribal Veterans Representative

Last month, two Puyallup Tribal Veterans attended the 80th Anniversary of D-Day celebrations in Normandy, France. Following are their thoughts regarding this event.

Rodney Sisson, Interim Vice Chairman of the Puyallup Tribal Veterans Committee shares these thoughts.

The hallowed grounds of Normandy hold the untold stories of countless heroes. Among them are 38 Native American soldiers, their bravery etched in the annals of D-Day.

Twenty-nine of these warriors lie in the Normandy American Cemetery at Omaha Beach. Each grave marked by a simple white cross. They came from diverse Tribes across the United States, each with their unique customs and traditions. Yet, they fought as one, united in their mission to liberate Europe from the clutches of tyranny. Their legacy is a testament to the enduring spirit of Native American warriors, their courage echoing through the ages.

Nine more Native American heroes found eternal rest at the Brittany American Cemetery. Like their comrades at Omaha, their stories are tales of bravery, resilience and unwavering dedication. They were scouts, code talkers, medics and infantrymen. Like those of their brethren at Omaha, their sacrifices should never be forgotten.

Eighty years after D-Day, the story of these fallen heroes was brought to the forefront by Charles Norman Shay, a Penobscot Indian from Maine and a veteran of the 1st Infantry Division who served as a combat medic on Omaha Beach. Marie-Pascale Legrand and Charles Shay were instrumental in organizing a commemoration for the 29 Native Americans buried at the Normandy American Cemetery. Their efforts helped to shed light on the often overlooked contributions of Native American soldiers during World War II.

Shay's own story is one of courage and resilience. As a medic, he braved the relentless onslaught of enemy fire to save the lives of countless soldiers. His bravery earned him the Silver Star and the French Legion of Honor. Yet, despite his heroic actions, Shay remained humble, always emphasizing the collective effort of his fellow soldiers.

The story of the fallen Native American soldiers of D-Day, as highlighted by Shay, is a testament to the enduring spirit of these Native warriors. Their sacrifices, though made decades ago, continue to inspire and remind us of the high cost of freedom.

The 38 Native American heroes who rest in the hallowed grounds of Normandy are a testament to the unwavering courage and dedication of these warriors.

I would like to thank Tribal Council for allowing us to go and honor the Native American heroes.

Clarence Tougaw, Chairman of the Puyallup Tribal Veterans Committee shares these thoughts.

Our trip to France for the 80th Anniversary of D-Day will always remain near and dear to my heart. Given the opportunity by our Tribal Council to make this trip was a life-changing experience. I witnessed and participated in some events that I had never seen before or even knew they existed.

It was also a time to make new friends and visit with some prior acquaintances. The most special times were listening to a few of the veterans talk about their time in the military and afterward. After listening to those stories and then walking on those same beaches imagining what they saw and went through brought me to tears. I will be forever grateful to those veterans.

It is the CRCAC's responsibility to educate the community/service providers. We must understand and educate ourselves on child sexual abuse and prevention. Let's explain why body safety is important and why it is important in supporting and teaching correct names of body parts because it reinforces the myth of "stranger danger." We must heal our families and keep our children safe. Thus, we are educating the community so you can teach your children the importance of body safety. Lastly, we must understand that "stranger danger" is important to educate, but it is most important to understand most children and families know the predator. Please keep reading for further information on this topic.

Knowing the correct names of our body parts helps keep children safe from sexual abuse that is most often perpetrated by a family member and not a stranger.

Our children's boundaries and safety are important to us! Most children who experience abuse are abused by someone they know (and usually trust), NOT by a stranger. The community can support keeping our children safe by focusing on where kids are unsafe. Statistically, the majority of children and teen victims know the perpetrator who is from their family and social groups. Empowering a child by giving them the tools that help them stay safe from within their family and social groups begins by teaching body safety rules. Debunking stranger danger myths is accomplished by teaching children to talk about safe and unsafe touching, and correct names for their body parts, so that they may help keep their bodies safe from everyone!

Healing our community means that we prevent sexual abuse of our children, and nurture and protect our children. Helping our spirits release the fear, shame and hurt is necessary to continue growing stronger and more resilient! Increasing the use of the real vocabulary of body parts creates body safety for our children's sacred bodies. Demonstrating that we value a child's whole self and we do not keep secrets about bodies empowers children to have ownership of their bodies, helps them to live in the light and know that we know that they are sacred. The whole community is watching and protecting our children. It is safe to protect one's self. You belong, you are safe and it is safe to report.

The reasons children don't tell include:

1. Feelings of guilt, shame and self-blame which leaves children vulnerable to the manipulation tactics of the perpetrator.
2. Fear: Children don't disclose as they will be blamed for the abuse. Since the perpetrator is often a family member or someone important in the child's life the perpetrator may use threats of abandonment, rejection or tell the child that their family may break apart.
3. Lack of understanding: The child may be unaware that what happened to them is wrong or inappropriate due to their age and level of development. The perpetrator can manipulate them into believing this is a game or normal behavior.
4. Relationship with the perpetrator: Most perpetrators are family and friends and in one-third of the cases the abuser is another minor.
5. Gender: Child sexual assault is one of the most underreported crimes, and male survivors are less likely to disclose than females due to gender-based stereotypes.

Using the correct body part vocabulary helps a child feel safe to report to a safe person and helps the safe person understand what the child is talking about. Using code or pet names for body parts also communicates that one's body parts and any discussion around it is a secret. The message that bodies are something to be ashamed of is received and can be internalized. "If we can't talk about our bodies, then I can't talk about when something is wrong that involves my body either." These secrets keep children vulnerable to experiencing further abuse and create further trauma preventing community healing. This makes it very difficult for a child to report, to get help and for our community to protect and keep them safe. "Whether it is an elbow, an eyeball or a vagina, it's a part of their body and they have a right to set their body boundaries. But it all starts with empowerment." (childsafetypledge.org, n.d)

Child sexual abuse is difficult to talk about, talk about it anyway. Teaching our community to speak correct names of body parts helps normalize this speaking for our children. Speaking the correct names of body parts invites our children to speak the language of body safety.

Table 1. Differences Between Child Sexual Abuse And Adult Rape.

	Child Sexual Abuse	Adult Sexual Assault
Timing of Disclosure	Usually gradual/longitudinal over weeks, months, years	Often acute
Perpetrator Characteristics	Often a trusted caregiver known to the child and family	Often a stranger or a date
Physical Force	Uncommon, as perpetrator gradually manipulates the child's trust and strives to avoid discovery of the abuse	Often violent

Is your child up-to-date on well-child visits and vaccines? It's time to get back on track for school, childcare and beyond!

Well-child visits

Childhood is a time of rapid growth and change. Well-child visits most often occur when your child is developing the fastest. Well-child visits are important for many reasons, including: tracking growth and developmental milestones, discussing any concerns about your child's health and getting scheduled vaccinations to prevent illnesses. These visits are the perfect time to ask questions and discuss any concerns you may have.

Vaccines

Vaccines are the most important tools available for preventing diseases. Vaccinations not only protect children from developing a potentially serious illness, but also protect the community by reducing the spread of infectious diseases.

Schedule for well-child visits and vaccines

Tribe opens Woven Seafood & Chophouse

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

The sounds of drumming and singing filled the air at the Ruston Way waterfront Tuesday, July 9, as a ribbon-cutting ceremony for the Tribe's new restaurant, Woven Seafood & Chophouse, was held.

Heritage Division Manager Connie McCloud delivered a blessing and prayer before Puyallup Tribal Council Chairman Bill Sterud, Council members Annette Bryan, James Rideout, Anna Bean and Fred Dillon, and chef Roy Yamaguchi shared remarks.

Each council member touched on the significance of the restaurant opening and the Tribe's efforts to reclaim its land, notably through the Puyallup Tribe of Indians Land Into Trust Act, which passed earlier this year after testimony from Council members Bryan and Rideout and added 17 acres of the Tribe's land into trust.

"This was more than a two-year process and Tribal Council was working really hard with our congressional delegation and lobbyists in Washington, D.C., and the federal agencies to get this property into trust," Councilwoman Bryan said.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs initially refused to put the property into trust without a congressional act because of previous contamination on the land, Councilwoman Bryan said.

"We worked really, really hard to explain to members of congress that this land was not contaminated by us, it was taken from us, and then contaminated, and then we had to buy it back at top dollar," she said. "It was really important that we go and educate members of congress. I testified on the Senate side and the Senate passed the bill, and (Councilman Rideout) testified on the House side, the House passed the bill and the president signed it into law."

The ribbon-cutting ceremony followed an exclusive first taste of the menu for Puyallup Tribal members Sunday, July 7, and a soft opening Monday, July 8.

The restaurant door handles are carved paddles featuring Coast Salish art by Puyallup Tribal member and artist Nick Earl.

The restaurant is now open for business and reservations can be made at eatwoven.com.

Here is a summary of what each council member and Yamaguchi said.

Chairman Bill Sterud

"Two acres of our land right here. For thousands of years this was our village site right here. Then, it got stolen, taken away, but we made a commitment to get as much of our land, our village, back. It did take a while, but it's going to happen. ... This little piece of property – two acres – is part of our economic development plan that we'll be using and moving forward with. ... When you go on in there and look at our restaurant it'll blow you away, taste the food, it'll blow you away."

Annette Bryan

"This is really exciting. I just want to thank Matt (Wadhvani) and his whole team. ... Former councilman Tim Reynon, he was part of laying the foundation for this, and our ancestors who laid the foundation for this all the way along and we're just so grateful today. To Roy Yamaguchi and your team, the food in Hawaii was magical, I think the food here is even better. Tacoma, you're in for a real treat."

James Rideout

"I want to give thanks to all of our Elders. I said this morning that 55-plus years ago we weren't even a Tribe. If it wasn't for that perseverance, that consistency, that thought and that mindset of actually wanting a future for us and that future is now. I want to thank the membership for putting us in a position to do something like this. Without your decision, these decisions wouldn't be made here today. ... We're the next generation preparing for the generation after that. That is important. ... For us to have our ancestors behind us ... we'll look out there and see our ancestors on that water. It overwhelms me with happiness that we're all doing this together."

Anna Bean

"It's a beautiful time at the Puyallup Tribe. We've been reclaiming for some time not only our songs, dances and language, and now we are in the process of taking our land back. It's a beautiful time to be a part of the Puyallup Tribe as is every day. I'm thankful you all have made it today. Thank you to Puyallup Tribal Enterprises for all of the work and hours getting everything done to make today possible. This is a part of plan, a strategic plan by many that aren't here today. I want to thank our ancestors and our Elders that are here today. A lot of them have paved the way for us to be standing in front of you and I'm grateful to every single one of you for allowing us to walk in your footsteps, showing us the pathway to where we can take this a little bit further than we've gone."

Fred Dillon

"I'm overwhelmed by joy, happiness and pride. We're getting our land back here. This is our ancestral land we've always had, and we're reclaiming it again. I want to thank and put my hands up to our Elders that are here. I look forward to the future because this is what we're leaving behind. Our job always as Tribal leaders is to protect and preserve what we have now. We come from a time where we didn't have much, and look at the Puyallup Tribe now. We're here. We're here now, and we're leaving something for the future."

Roy Yamaguchi

"It was important to me not just to have a restaurant here, but it was important to have a restaurant where we can tie in bringing cultures together. That's why the name of this restaurant is Woven. We want to weave the cultures through everything that involves life. ... Coming up with something special, especially for the Puyallup Tribe members, to me I felt that would be an incredible thing to accomplish."

Frank Moxley Griese recognized as Honored Elder for June

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

A senior Puyallup Tribal member is recognized as the Honored Elder each month at the Elders Luncheon.

Frank Moxley Griese became the latest Puyallup Tribal Elder to be honored on June 21 as he was blanketed by Puyallup Tribal Council member Monica Miller and Executive Director of the Elders Wellness Center Vernetta Miller.

Griese was also gifted a cedar fedora hat and will have his photo placed on the wall at the House of Respect along with other Honored Elders from the past.

Each Honored Elder also records a video in which they talk about their lives and experiences. Here is Griese's story in his own words.

"I'm a Puyallup Tribal Elder. I work for the Puyallup Tribe and I've been around here for quite a while. I've watched the Tribe grow immensely and it's a very exciting time in my life to see that kind of thing. (I'm) always hoping that the Tribe does better and they're doing excellent at this point in time.

"I was born here in Tacoma, but at a very young age I went to Thurston County. My mother fell out of a car in a car accident and died of an aneurysm when I was 2 years old. I lived with my father for a while, but he didn't really know how to raise up a small baby, so I was given to one of my sisters. This was in the late 50s, early 60s, and the Salmon Wars were beginning to happen throughout the Tribes in the Northwest. Individual families were involved in this and they would be going in and out of jail, in and out of hospitals, it was a very tumultuous time for Tribes.

"A lot of the time I would be taken from one family and they'd give me to another family. They would say, 'Can you take care of Moxley because we're not really sure what's going to be happening in the next couple of days,' knowing there was probably going to be a struggle on the river or someone would be in jail and they would have to figure out how to get them out of jail or the hospital.

"I stayed with a woman down there named Hazel Griese who later became my adopted mother. She was very good friends with the Nisqually Tribe down there, and because of her friendship, one of the Nisqually Elders, Billy Frank's mother, Angeline Frank, who is my grandmother, asked Hazel, 'Could you watch over Moxley because we're in some very hard times right now.' So, Hazel said, 'OK, I'll take care of him,' and mind you I was only about 2 and a half years old.

"Her kids were grown, left home and had lives, and she took on this little baby, so the rest of my life I lived there.

"As a young child I got to have the best of the Elders' knowledge. They trained me, taught me and showed me about things.

"When I went to Hazel Griese and Ray Griese they had three kids – two sons and a daughter. In my own biological family, I have four sisters and two brothers. Unfortunately, most of them have passed on by now, but I didn't really spend much time with them because of the situation at the time.

"When I was a little boy, we grew up there down in Thurston County, one of our big excitements was fishing. I had a group of friends in high school that would come down to our house for two reasons: on the weekend before my dad came home my mom would bake, so they'd show up to get the bread, fresh rolls, all this stuff, and the other reason they'd show up is to go fishing with us.

"We'd all go fishing and there'd be like 10 of us – 10 kids and my mom. I'd ask my friend, 'Who's the best fisherman you've ever met,' and he'd go, 'Best fisherman I ever knew was your mom, Hazel Griese.' That's the kind of woman she was. She wasn't the type of woman to be so involved with flowers and all that. She wanted to be out in nature, hiking, fishing or on a river. She was a very unique person and I'd give anything that's good about me, I got it from that woman.

"When I got out of college at (Tacoma Community College) I was unsatisfied with what I had learned. On a whim, someone said, 'You know what you should be? A hairdresser, you've got the personality.' So, I said OK.

"Me and my very best friend, Luis, we enrolled in hairdressing school. During our time in hairdressing school we had a competition because we were pretty good, I guess. One of the competitions in Vancouver, Canada, was sponsored by Vidal Sassoon Corporation and their artistic director came up to us and said, 'You know what, how would you like to come up to the academy and be trained by Vidal Sassoon?' I jumped on that and turned out the academy was in London, England. They sent us there, we stayed there for over a year, trained with the Sassoon Corporation, came back to Seattle, opened several salons. ... We traveled extensively doing platform artistry.

"I kind of had the idea that I should start doing more photography, so I started shooting more with the camera. I found more enjoyment in that than I did standing behind a chair and doing that anymore.

"As things progressed, I went to college and learned more about the camera, but it wasn't taking me where I wanted to go, so I went back to college and started taking broadcast production. Then, I started taking motion picture production – I went to Evergreen State for that.

"When I finally grew up and came out of all that I worked for the Mariners. I was the instant replay guy for the Mariners. I would be down on the field and was the (parabolic microphone) guy. I also got to work with the Huskies – my home was Husky Stadium, so that was a great time in my life.

"And then, as luck would have it, I bought this little, cheap camera one time and went down to a powwow on the waterfront. ... I started shooting primarily in Indian Country because it was a hit.

"I worked for ABC Sports, Northwest Indian News which was a Native American news network out of Bellingham, so that gave me the opportunity to travel throughout the reservations all over Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

"I also did work for Puyallup. I'd come in and bid on projects they were proposing, and at one point I had heard about a big project and wanted to get in the door. I walked in and got an appointment with Council. They brought me in and at that time Herman Dillon was our Chairman. Herman sat at one end of the table and he said, 'Well, Frank, what are you doing in here?' and I said 'I see that we're going to be having some construction done and I'd like to put a proposal in.'

"I felt fairly confident I was in good shape on that and he said, 'You don't need to do that,' and I thought, 'Oh no, someone got ahead of me.'

"He goes, 'Frank, how long have you been shooting for us?' and I go, 'I don't know, off and on for 10 years.' He said, 'I put a motion on the floor right now to make Frank Griese our video production person for the Puyallup Tribe of Indians.' Everyone voted and I became who I am now. I grew up to be a videographer of the Puyallup Tribe and I've never looked back.

"This has been a great experience. ... During the time I've done this I've got to watch the growth of this Tribe from the ground up.

"It is one of my favorite things to look back and see all of the things I've captured, but the people make the Puyallup Tribe. One day, you might be talking to a 102-year-old Elder or we might be talking to someone in Fisheries. The Tribe is on the move so strong right now you just never know who you're going to be interviewing or talking with. That's the exciting part – being on the ground level of the Tribe on its move.

"Right now, I'm married and I have a daughter Angelique, or as everyone else calls her, Angel. I have grandchildren – my grandson, Dominic, my granddaughter, Samantha, and Samantha has blessed me with five great-grandchildren. I'm enjoying the family element.

"I think the future is what you make it. There's no real set-in-stone guideline. It's what you make it. My future, I'm not done yet. I always tell people I'm going to drive this puppy until the wheels fall off it and that's the way I'm going."

Gunfire detection sensors to be installed around reservation

By Hailey Palmer, Puyallup Tribal News

Parts of Portland Avenue and a portion of Tacoma's Eastside will soon have sensors installed that are designed to detect gunfire.

The Puyallup Tribal Police Department was awarded grant money to install ShotSpotter. The system will cover two square miles on the Tribe's reservation.

"Obviously, our reservation is bigger than that, so my decision was to hit the Eastside core of Tacoma – the Portland Avenue core – and to hit as much as we could in Fife, including the Lux housing development and up through 12th and Alexander," said Tribal Police Chief Joe Duenas. "We tried to cover as many Puyallup Tribal properties as we could."

The sensors can be attached to streetlights and will be visible in plain sight.

ShotSpotter's sensors are triggered by sound. If the system classifies a sound as a gunshot, it sends the data to a ShotSpotter review center. If gunfire is confirmed, police and dispatch centers are alerted. The entire process takes less than 60 seconds, according to SoundThinking, the company behind ShotSpotter.

ShotSpotter sensors will cover areas that include Alexander Avenue and the Tribe's Lux housing development in Fife.

"ShotSpotter technology triangulates and helps discover where shots are being fired within the reservation boundaries," Duenas said. "This technology will determine if it's a firearm or firework. It will send the information directly to our police officers on their cell phones in their cars and on their computers. Our officers will be able to respond immediately to the area."

Partnering with cities and police since 1997, ShotSpotter is used in more than 160 cities nationwide and has led to a 48% reduction in shootings in a Cincinnati neighborhood, a 33% reduction in gun violence injuries in Greenville, North Carolina, and a 36% reduction in homicides year-over-year in Pittsburgh, according to data from SoundThinking.

Duenas said he hopes having ShotSpotter installed will help curb the problem of residents not calling the police when they hear gunfire.

"There's a lot of shots fired in Tacoma and a lot of people aren't calling 911 anymore," he said. "Sometimes, there's a lag in the time of people calling our dispatch, and sometimes they just don't call because I think a lot of people have heard shots fired in this community for a long time."

After the system has been in place for some time, Tribal Police plan to further collaborate with the cities of Tacoma and Fife, and share the data it gathers from the sensors.

Duenas said he hopes to see ShotSpotter installed this summer and see it serve as another device Tribal Police can utilize to enhance safety around the reservation like the body cameras officers started wearing a few years ago.

"It's just one more tool to help us better respond to and assist victims of crime," Duenas said. "I would love to see it make our community, our reservation, safer. Any reduction (in crime) would be great."

Puyallup Tribe donates more than $400,000 to 37 local organizations

By Puyallup Tribal News Staff

The Puyallup Tribe Charity Trust Board and Puyallup Tribal Council have awarded 37 local organizations a combined $400,120.

Representatives of more than 30 nonprofit and charitable organizations were greeted and thanked by members of the Puyallup Tribal Council as they arrived for the June 20 celebration at the Emerald Queen Event Center in Tacoma. Tribal Council delivered remarks recognizing recipients and all attendees gathered for a group photo.

"It's great to see all the different charities and the happiness they have," said Chairman Bill Sterud. "I know running a charity is not easy, it's a lot of big work."

The donations are funded from 2023 Emerald Queen Casino revenue as part of an agreement with the state of Washington that includes additional contributions for smoking cessation and problem gambling programs, and for impact costs paid to local governments for such things as fire and police services.

The Puyallup Tribe has donated more than $24 million to hundreds of local organizations through its Charity Trust Board since 2012. The Puyallup Tribal Council has donated millions more out of its own budget to help community organizations that don't qualify for Charity Trust Board funding, such as Maui United Way, which received $30,000 in 2023 to assist with wildfire relief efforts.

Casino operations are also the single biggest revenue source for the Puyallup Tribe's government. They pay for comprehensive services to the Tribe's Membership, including children's services, housing, educational support, emergency assistance and funeral services. In the past two years, the Tribe has embarked on an ambitious economic diversification program that will not only strengthen its economic base to bring security for future generations but bring more jobs to the region.

WSDOT updates

Submitted by the Washington State Department of Transportation

The Washington State Department of Transportation is busy with state Route 167 completion project construction this summer. Here's a snapshot of what's coming:

I-5 closure

WSDOT will close Interstate 5 overnight in both directions between state Route 18 and 54th Ave. E. over four weekends later this year. These closures are necessary to set girders for a new bridge that will carry the future state Route 167 Expressway over I-5 and to demolish the old 70th Ave. bridge. The weekend closures will occur Friday nights to Saturday mornings and Saturday nights to Sunday mornings. I-5 will be open during the day. Access to local businesses and residents will be available via state Route 99, but travelers should expect delays. Once the final dates are selected, WSDOT will share that information widely.

Hylebos Creek and Surprise Lake Tributary

Crews have been working in Hylebos Creek along state Route 99. This summer, they are creating over half a mile of new stream channels that will realign the stream so that it flows under recently constructed bridges. Before any work can begin, WSDOT must ensure all fish are safely removed from the work zone and relocated to a different area of the creek where they will not be affected. This process, known as de-fishing, is crucial to protect the ecosystem. Crews are only permitted to work in the streams during designated fish windows, which are between June 15 and Sept. 15, depending on the stream location.

Partial demolition of 70th Ave. bridge

The decommissioned 70th Ave. E. bridge over I-5 was replaced by the new Wapato Way East bridge in 2021. In early July, crews began removing a 75-foot section of the old bridge, which is in the way of the future I-5/state Route 167 diverging diamond interchange and adjacent to the Hylebos Creek riparian restoration project area. Crews also began building a temporary road to move material in and out of the work zone. Crews will remove the remaining portion of the 70th Ave. bridge during the full closure of I-5 later this year.

Summer events

WSDOT is hosting a booth at several local events throughout the summer. These events have been excellent opportunities to meet the project team and ask questions. In Pierce County, you can find WSDOT's state Route 167 team at two upcoming events:

Milton Days – Aug. 17

Fife Harvest Festival – Oct. 5
